ted lecture, "The Armenian Massacres," delivered at the Third Presbyterian church last night by the pastor, Rev. R. intently listened to, and the stereopticon views made the lecture striking in its vividness of portrayal, of the sufferings Christians have endured at the hands of the turbaned and cruel Turk.

The lecture was given in three parts, and a splendid programme of musical ing one of rare enjoyment. The following synopsis of Rev. Mr. Bigger's retire lecture. In the course of his remarks Rev, Mr. Bigger said;

"Our intention is to bring before you a page in the history of the Turkish empire, which for bloodthirsty cruelty and diabolical horror finds no parallel in modern history. Though the extent of the heartless cruelties is but partially known, simply because all avenues for obtaining reliable information are so carefully controlled, and much incriminating news suppressed, still, sufficient is known to make the heart sicken and the blood run chill, especially when we call to mind that it takes place in the nineteenth century, under the eyes of the civilized states of Europe, each of which has vigorously protested and marshalled its ironclads at the gates of Constantinople.

"Ent aven while! The wessels as a second of the civilized states of the control of the control of the civilized states of Europe, each of which has vigorously protested and marshalled its ironclads at the gates of Constantinople.

"Ent aven while! The wessels are constantinople.

"But even whilst this was going on, thousands of Armenian homes were sacked, tens of thousands of Armenian Christians were slaughtered, their wives and children outraged and butchered, yet statesmen seemed powerless to effect any real relief and the united powers of all the European states seemed powerless to mitigate or put a stop to these horrors. The difficulties we have been dealing with are not of recent date whoily. The massacres we are deploring are not the only series that have shocked humanity—they are of constant whoily. The massacres we are deploring are not the only series that have shocked humanity—they are of constant occurrence. It has been a regular system adopted by the Turkish government for preventing the Christian population outnumbering and overpowering the Mussulman.

"Every ten years, or thereabouts, systematic outbreaks have taken place and several wars have been fought between Russia and Turkey, assisted by western nations, the real cause being Turkish oppression of the Christians; and it makes one blush to think that British and American influence have prevented the Turk from being blotted out of the map of Europe. While the sultan has been making promises of reforms, the flendish slaughter has continued. Matters have been bad enough in Cuba, but the condition of the Cubans is a thousand times better than that of the Armenian Christions. Let me gives you a few extracts from relihat of the Armenian Christions. Let be gives you a few extracts from reli-

"A number of young men were bound hand and foot, laid out in a row, brush-wood piled about them, and were burnt alive." Some sixty young women and girls were driven into church, where the soldiers were ordered to do as they liked with them, and afterwards kill them, which order was carried out." Children were placed in a row, one behind another, and a bullet fired down the line to see how many a soldier could kill with one bullet."
"Children were held up by the balt."

"At Ourfah on December 28, 1895, crowds of Armenian men, women and children took refuge in a cathedral from the fiendish Turks. Some were shot down with pistols, but this work was too tedious, so they collected a quantity of bedding, saturated it with kerosene, and then set fire to it, blocking the entrance with inflammable material, and there left the mass of struggling human beings to perish in the flames. All this whilst the sultan assures Europe that all is quiet and the Armenians safe.

"Prof. Ramsey says: T assert with the most perfect confidence that our country at the present time seems not at all to appreciate the scale and horor of these massacres, still less the suffering that has been endured by Christians. "Men of Britain and America, are these things to continue." The answer rests not with our statesmen, but with you. Let the voice of English-speaking nations be lifted up in one vehement and determined protest, and the long needed reforms will be forced upon the Turk. But delay that protest or make it with luke-warmness and indifference, and the burning words of William Watson will indeed be the epitaph upon our lifeless Christian professions:

A feature of the Lenten service at St. Matthew's P. E. church last night, was the remarkably fine-discourse, delivered by Rev. Dr. Cyrus T. Brady, of Philadelphia, and archdeacon of the Philadelphia diocese. He urged a more general spirit of self-sacrifice, and his remarks were brimful of Christian teachings. He took occasion to regret the decadence of public opinion, in the respect of a pathy towards religion, and instanced the fact that as recently as twenty years ago a family which did not associate itself with some church, was frowned on, while at present a family may abstain year after year, from attending any church whatever, spend Sundays in various forms of outings, and yet retain the respect of a community. Dr. Brady's remarks along this line were very forceful.

There is a pathetic strain through his letter, especially when he tells of his rapidly thinning frame, owing to the demands made on his nervous energy. For instance, he recalls one night in the past week when he was summoned out of a warm bed to answer the night call, and was confronted at the street door by a sporty, young man afflicted with a husky jag, who asked permission to use the telephone to call a hack. In noting his answer to the sporty young man, the drug clerk uses several dashes and exclamation points. Further, in his letter, he goes into the postage stamp problem, but as that is too well known for identification, his views are passed by without comment. One would hardly believe, however, that people often call up for a postal card, and ask to have the same charged to their account. Yet so doth the prescription filter allege. In fact, he alleges so many things in his attack on human mature, that in order to stand in with a grateful public, a halt is called right here.

city of Brooklyn. Four days later, in spite of the best medical aid, he died. The doctors said the judge had kidney disease and had lived a surprisingly long time, everything considered.

A man or woman may live along for years with incompetent kidneys only to collapse as suddenly as a house of carls when the baby's hand knocks it over. The early indications of Bright's disease are sometimes very elight—headaches, dull pains, depressed feelings, lack of energy—ail these indicate the first stages of Bright's disease and yet few people think they mean anything serious until, often, it is too late.

There has never been but one discovery known to the world and the medical profession for checking Bright's disease in its beginning or curing it after it has progressed. That discovery, which is popular in Europe, America and throughout the world is Warner's Safe Cure.
